REVISION OF SILK ROAD AND FATHER TO SON

Q1. ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS IN 100 – 120 WORDS:

- a) How is the father's helplessness brought out in the poem?
- b) What disappointed the author in Darchen?
- c) Why do you think the lesson has been named "Silk Road".

a) The father's helplessness in the poem is conveyed through his emotional turmoil and inability to protect or comfort his loved ones. His anguish is evident in his actions and expressions, as he grapples with the pain of his child's suffering or loss. The poem captures his internal struggle, highlighting his vulnerability and powerlessness in the face of uncontrollable circumstances. This helplessness is further emphasized by the father's silent tears, broken words, or futile attempts to provide solace, all of which underscore his deep emotional distress and the limits of his ability to make things right.

b) In Darchen, the author was disappointed by the unexpected challenges and harsh realities that clashed with their romanticized expectations. The town's bleak environment, lack of basic amenities, and the overall sense of desolation stood in stark contrast to the author's envisioned serene and spiritual experience. Additionally, the unfriendly or indifferent behavior of some locals may have compounded the sense of disappointment, making the journey more arduous and less fulfilling than anticipated.

c) The lesson is named "Silk Road" because it draws parallels between the historical trade route and the metaphorical journey of self-discovery, exploration, and cultural exchange. Just as the ancient Silk Road connected diverse civilizations and facilitated the exchange of goods, ideas, and knowledge, the lesson symbolizes the interconnectedness of experiences and the transformative power of travel. The title evokes a sense of adventure and the pursuit of new horizons, encouraging readers to embark on their own journeys of growth and understanding, much like the travelers of the Silk Road.
